Kali puja is significant during Diwali puja. It is performed by worshipers to protect themselves from evil forces and to seek the blessings of the goddess Kali. Kali puja is another major event during Diwali, following Durga puja and Lakshmi puja. Durga puja is performed for 9 days, during which the image of the goddess Durga is worshipped in different forms. Lakshmi puja is performed on the last day of Diwali, to invoke the blessings of the goddess Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth and prosperity. Kali puja is performed to worship the goddess Kali, who is considered to be one of the major deities in Hinduism.

Kali puja is celebrated on the new moon day of the Hindu month of Kartik. During this puja, devotees remain awake throughout the night to worship Kali Mata. The puja is mostly done in the houses of Bengal, Odisha, Assam, and eastern India. It is dedicated to Goddess Kali. The puja is performed amidst the sound of dhol and devotees remain awake throughout the night to worship Kali Mata. Kali is the first of the ten Mahavidyas and is considered to be a powerful deity. The puja is performed to invoke the blessings of Kali Mata and to seek protection from evil forces.

The puja starts at midnight after Durga puja and is performed by singing prayers and chanting mantras. The puja is done in a temple or in the home of the devotees. The basic requirement for the puja is the image of Kali Mata, which alone is considered to be a source of powerful divine energy. Kali Mata is placed in a comfortable or secret area of the house. The puja is performed by reciting prayers and mantras, including the Kali Chalisa and the Kali Stotram.
